The Cambridge System is located at the edge of the Bretonia region, and serves as the primary food producing System for various planets and bases throughout Bretonia and abroad. Other than food, Cryer Pharmaceuticals has also established a base in this System, concentrating particularly on the production of pharmaceuticals. The other side the Cambridge heavily consumes diamonds, optical chips and alien organisms and in recent times, has raised the demand for certain black market goods. On some days, experienced traders make fortunes by knowing the right routes enabling avoidance of numerous police patrols. It is also rumoured that once a month it is regularly seen armed transporters carrying prisoners.

Other than the presence of the Bretonia Armed Forces and Police, this System also houses the Cambridge Research Station belonging to Cryer Pharmaceuticals and the Cardiff Mining Facility by the IMG. The only serious criminal presence in this System are the Corsairs, preying on the passing shipments of gold. A jump hole in this System leading to Omega 5, and is possibly where the Corsair raiders are coming from.

Along the southern part of the System, parallel to the Trade Lane between Planet Cambridge and the Ross Planetoid, is the Cambridge Line, a network of weapons platforms and communications satellites anchored by the Battleship Norfolk. However, the Line has so far failed to achieve its goal of curbing Corsair attacks on the System. Criminal freelancers should be aware of its existence; as any one of the platforms has sufficient armament to destroy any light or medium fighter as well as most freighters.
