Yakutsk was at first just an unimportant frontier System for the Coalition, which was for a long time used by their Navy for secret testing of advanced missiles weapons in a nebula environment. This changed after a sudden unexpected series of lost ships, which resulted in a new, thorough exploration of the whole System. The result of this survey was shocking for the Navy: they found not only new jump-holes, but more importantly, an enormous Dimensional Rift. Irregular energy eruptions coming from the Rift were found to be a possible cause for disabling a ships' systems and the subsequent loosing of ships. Despite the harsh local environment the Coalition Navy decided to significantly increase here patrol activity and lay a minefield between the Rift and the fast Trade-Lane connection built in the northern part of the System.
