1. Description

3500 years ago Planet Devra was home of a race similar to us humans. The civilization which we meanwhile call Ancients reached high technological standards long before they decided to expand into the deeps of space. It did not take long for them to use the resources of the nearby planets and to build giant space stations around their homeworld. Still this race was not prepared for the Nomads. The first ships trying to leave this system were very soon attacked and giant fleets made sure that the Ancient homeworld had to fall. Surprisingly the space stations were left intact. Until today these stations automatically do their job like thousands of years ago, protected by AI drones.
